

About Myself

My name is Nancy Blackett. My matriculation number is 0900231b. I am originally from Nibthwaite near Coniston Water, in Cumbria. My hobbies are sailing, trekking and camping. The main subjects I am taking are Naval Architecture and Marine Engineering, Spanish and Geography. My ambition is to sail round the world single handed.

IT for Study

IT can help in many ways – for instance I can type my essays in Word, which is good since my writing is awful. I can do searches on the web for material for my studies. Learning more about spreadsheets will be essential as I am doing an engineering course. And by the way... I plan to design and build my own yacht one day. I'll call it the Esperance.

Networks

A computer network is a bunch of computers all joined up so that they can communicate with each other. Most networked computers can connect to the big, world-wide network called the internet. Stuff can be sent between them, so you can email messages or download music and pictures from the internet.

Backing up

Backing up files is important because computers and networks crash sometimes and you can lose work. Simplest back-up is a USB pen drive but you can use disks and other options too.
