Registration is now open for the first international Borkenstein Course on Drugs and Alcohol.

We are now accepting applications for the April 2014 Borkenstein Course.

The Center for Forensic Science Research & Education will host the first International Robert F. Borkenstein Course on Drugs and Alcohol Course at the historical University of Glasgow in Scotland, UK.

For the first time in its history, The Robert F. Borkenstein Course will travel internationally to the historic University of Glasgow in Scotland, UK. This week-long course will combine content from both the Alcohol and Drug Courses traditionally held in the United States. The course will cover topics related to the pharmacology of drugs and alcohol and their effects on psychomotor performance and driving, as well as taking a look at testing and law enforcement concerns specific to the United Kingdom and Europe. The renowned faculty will consist of both long-standing Borkenstein Course faculty and first-time European lecturers.
