Press Release

18 August 2010

Maney Publishing to publish Journal of Conflict Archaeology from 2011

The Journal of Conflict Archaeology, formerly published by Brill, will be relaunched by Maney Publishing in 2011. Founded and edited by Tony Pollard and Iain Banks (University of Glasgow, UK), the Journal of Conflict Archaeology is devoted to battlefield and military archaeology and other spheres of conflict archaeology, covering all periods with a worldwide scope. Additional fields of interest include the archaeology of industrial and popular protest, contested landscapes and monuments, nationalism and colonialism, class conflict, the origins of conflict, forensic applications in war-zones, and human rights cases.

The Journal represents an exciting new discipline within Maney's list of 17 journals in archaeology and heritage, and provides an important outlet for the best research in this fast-growing subject.

The Editors, Tony Pollard and Iain Banks, are based at the Centre for Battlefield Archaeology at the University of Glasgow, UK. The Centre is the first facility of its kind and has earned a reputation as an international centre of excellence for the burgeoning study of the archaeology of battlefields and other archaeological manifestations of human conflict. Tony Pollard directed the programmes of survey and evaluation which brought to light the WWI mass graves of Australian and British troops at Fromelles in France, and which resulted in the recent re-burials of unknown soldiers with full military honours on the 94th anniversary of the start of the battle.

Tony Pollard welcomed the new publishing partnership: “The new arrangement with Maney brings exciting opportunities to develop the journal according to refreshed aims and scope, and to increase the international reach through robust promotion and publication of the journal in electronic and printed format.”

Iain Banks added: “The move to three issues per year allows for faster turnaround of articles, which is good news for authors whose work will be published quickly, and for readers who will be accessing the very latest research.”

Michael Gallico, Managing Director of Maney, is “delighted to publish this acclaimed journal, edited from what is widely regarded as the leading international centre in this rapidly expanding field of study.”

Journal of Conflict Archaeology follows the acquisition of War & Society in 2010 which Maney publishes on behalf of the University of New South Wales, Australia. Along with Arms & Armour published on behalf of the Royal Armouries, Maney has formed a key collection of journals in the field of conflict and military studies.

Journal of Conflict Archaeology
Edited by Tony Pollard (University of Glasgow) and Iain Banks (University of Glasgow)
3 issues per year
Print ISSN: 1574-0773
Online ISSN: 1574-0781

The Centre for Battlefield Archaeology was established in April 2006. Drawing experience from GUARD and the Department of Archaeology the Centre is the first facility of its kind and has earned a reputation as an international centre of excellence for the burgeoning study of the archaeology of battlefields and other archaeological manifestations of human conflict.

www.gla.ac.uk/departments/battlefieldarchaeology
Maney Publishing was formed in 1997 from a printing company established in 1900, and publishes scholarly journals in materials science, the humanities, and health science. Maney is committed to publishing high quality journals in print and electronic formats that are international in scope and peer-reviewed. With offices in Leeds and London in the UK, and in Cambridge and Philadelphia in North America, Maney publishes extensively for learned societies, universities and professional bodies around the world.

For more information please contact:
Alison Holgate, Marketing & PR Executive, Maney Publishing
Email: a.holgate@maney.co.uk Tel: +44 (0)113 386 8160

Press room – www.maney.co.uk/press