

Call for Coleman Prize 2014

Association of Business Historians

To be awarded at the ABH's 22nd Annual Conference, 27-28 June 2014

Newcastle University Business School

Named in honour of the British business historian Donald Coleman (1920-1995), this prize is awarded annually by the Association of Business Historians to recognise excellence in new research in Britain. It is open to PhD dissertations in Business History either having a British subject or completed at a British University. All dissertations completed in the previous two calendar years to that of their submission are eligible (with the exception of previous submissions). It is a condition of eligibility for the Prize that shortlisted finalists will present their findings at the Association's annual conference, which will be held on 27-28th June 2014 at Newcastle University Business School.

Please send a pdf document, including the title of your PhD dissertation and a brief 300 word abstract to Christine.Leslie@Glasgow.ac.uk by 21 February 2014. A long-list of candidates will be requested to send hard copies of their thesis to us by 14 March 2014, from which a shortlist of finalists will be chosen.

The value of the prize is £250 + expenses upto £250 and it is sponsored by the Taylor & Francis Group, a scholarly publisher. Further information will be placed on the ABH website early in the New Year - <http://www.gla.ac.uk/external/ABH>.
