

Call for Coleman Prize 2011 Association of Business Historians

To be awarded at the ABH Annual Conference, 1st-2nd July, 2011
Henley Business School, University Of Reading, UK

The Association of Business Historians invites submissions for consideration for the 2011 Coleman Prize. This prestigious prize is open to PhD dissertations in Business History either having a British subject or completed at a British University. All dissertations completed in the calendar years 2009 and 2010 are eligible (with the exception of previous submissions). The value of the prize is £200. Named in honour of the British Business Historian Donald Coleman, this prize is awarded annually by the Association of Business Historians to recognise excellence in new research in Britain. The Prize is now sponsored by Adam Matthew Publications Limited, a scholarly publisher which makes available original manuscript collections, rare printed books and other primary source materials in microform and electronic format. It is a condition of eligibility for the Prize that short-listed finalists present their findings at the Association's annual conference, to be held at Centre For International Business History, Henley Business School, University Of Reading, UK. For more information see <http://www.abh-net.org/>.

Please send the title of your PhD dissertation and a brief 300-word abstract to Dr. Aashish Velkar by 31 December 2010. A long-list of candidates will be requested to send hard copies of their thesis by 26 February 2011, from which a shortlist of finalists will be chosen.
