

Education Fair Trade Summit

Hosted by the University of Glasgow
Led by City of Glasgow Fair Trade Cooperative

Thursday, 10 March 2011, 9.30am to 12.30pm
Entry free of charge

Schools, Colleges and Universities in the west of Scotland are doing great things. When it comes to fair trade, the annual report card says 'could do better'! In Fair Trade Fortnight 2011 the University of Glasgow will host an education summit to which representatives from all schools, colleges and universities in the west are invited.

The summit is being led by members of the City of Glasgow Fair Trade Cooperative.

After an official opening we hope to welcome a producer from the developing world to address the summit. There will be several presentations by groups who have successfully achieved fair trade status in their institution.

After a break there will be sector-specific workshops and small meeting groups for people with particular responsibility for procurement and catering, schools, and for staff and students at colleges and universities.

The summit can accommodate 150 teachers, pupils, students, lecturers, administrators and other responsible officers.

Lunch will be provided from 12.30pm.

Come and share your experiences and find out how to achieve fair trade status, how to maintain the status, and what you can do to contribute to the City's profile as a fair trade city.

RSVP

Mark Irwin for Schools at mark.irwin@education.glasgow.gov

Dr Phil Cotton for Colleges and Universities at christine.blyth@glasgow.ac.uk.

This event is sponsored by the University of Glasgow, the Co-operative Group Membership in Scotland and Northern Ireland and the Co-operative Education Trust Scotland.

The co-operative membership

