

SCOTTISH CANCER FOUNDATION PRIZE 2015

The Scottish Cancer Foundation invites nominations for the 2015 prize which will be awarded to the person who, in the opinion of the Scottish Cancer Foundation Board, has made the most significant contribution to reducing the burden of cancer in Scotland.

Applicants may be nominated or be self nominated. The applicant need not be a health professional but must be living and working in Scotland at the time of the award. The nature of their contribution is not specified and the prize is open to anyone whose work has had a significant impact on cancer in Scotland, although evidence of wider impact would be welcomed.

The Prize

The Prize, amounting to up to £10,000, is awarded yearly at a fundraising subscription award ceremony and dinner. It is supported by the Grant Simpson Trust.

The Prize will be accompanied by The "Evans/Forrest" Medal in recognition of the founders of the Scottish Cancer Foundation.

Nominations

Nominations should be sent to the Scottish Cancer Foundation either by mail or electronically making a case, written by the nominator, as to why the nominee should be considered.

The nomination is to be accompanied by a short account, written by the nominee, as to how the prize money would be used to forward his or her work in cancer. This account is to be limited to 750 words.

This proforma should be completed with information on both the nomination and the case for the prize money.

The closing date for nominations is 30th June 2015.

The Scottish Cancer Foundation

Name of nominee

Email

Phone

Nominee's Organisation / Institution

Nominee's Job Title (if applicable)

Name and email address of nominator (if applicable)

Please describe why you feel the nominee should be considered for this prize in no more than 500 words

The Scottish Cancer Foundation

Please describe how the prize money would be used to progress your work in cancer. This account should be written by the nominee and should be limited to 750 words.

A large, empty white rounded rectangle intended for the nominee to write their response.